PANIC IN A CIRCUS.

A ferocious attack by a man-eating lion upon its keeper, in Winston, Conn.,

Tuesday night, during a sharp thunderstorm, was followed by a panic in which bundreds of frighteued people took part. It was within two minutes of the closing of the Nickel Plate Circus. The last great feat of the programme had come. Mozart, the lion tamer, just from Europe, was to enter the cage of Mad Lizzie—the lioness that had killed eight men. Half of northern Connecti cut was there. A wild storm was coming and the air was sulphurous and full ing and the air was sulphurous and full of electricity. Women were nervous and men were shaky. When the pant ing beast greeted the professor's ap pearance with a roar, the audience had received the worth of their money. It was the hoarse cry of the jungle and all the old time circus men, noted for their facts, exempted to the dead, line back of feats, crowded to the dead line back of the cages. Women stood on the seats clinging to their escorts, while the dark skinned lion tamer made his "finishing-touch" preparations for entering the lion's den. The lion tamer gave the beast a fierce look in the eye, a "justed a long 18 inch dagger up his sleeve, significant the extendents who alid acids.

the gate of the dummy cage leading to the grated chamber of horrors. The lioness lashed her tail furiously—each blow enough to break a man's leg. The lightning flamed and the heavens shook with thunder. A building in the neighborhood was struck. The crash sent the lioness snarling to the corner of her csgs. Another flash and crash and the
